

PORTFOLIO PROJECT

INTRODUCTION

Three years ago, a schoolmate from back home contacted me with the idea that she would like me to join her for the creation of a foundation, with the sole purpose to help all the children in poor remote areas of the country. Those who, because of the poverty of their parents, can not be able to go to school. I found this idea very interesting and we created LEXIK FOUNDATION the following year. Last year, we were able, with our own funds, to provide school supplies to more than 100 kids in a remote village in the west of the country. We wished we could do more, but our hands were tied but the lack of meaningful resources to help as many kids as we would like to. Starting the full stack courses gave me an idea. I decided to create a website that will enable us to approach people around the world, to show them our actions and ask them to join us so that poor kids so that their right to a decent education can be a reality. I deeply think inside me that there are good people out there willing to help those in need, especially children, who have the right to dream of a better future. People who feel good about themselves when helping people around them. This project will make it possible to reach them and ask them to join us to make a better future for the whole humanity, because, according to the French writer Victor Hugo :”Every child that we educate is a man we gain... God, the first author of all that is written, put on this earth of intoxicated men, the wings of the spirits in the pages of books.” And finally, this project will help
